“The 7 Biggest Mistakes Event Planners Make When Hiring Speakers And Entertainers... And How To Avoid Them!”

It is very, very, very rare for a professional entertainer to write this kind of report. Many other entertainers and entertainment agencies do NOT want you know this information. Please take the time to read it carefully. In fact, if you are - as I hope - very interested in making sure that your company's events are successful, then

I urge you to get comfortable, ask not to be disturbed, and STUDY this report - it IS that important! It reveals vital information that you NEED to know!

Dear Friend,

It's shocking but true.

Every day, businesses hire entertainers that they should not be hiring. Entertainers and entertainment agencies often lie about their qualifications, charge you a LOT more than they should, end up turning your important event into an embarrassment and put your reputation on the line by presenting sub-par performances.

Organizing a corporate event is a DIFFICULT and STRESSFUL job. There are so many details that must be attended to. But here is the undeniable truth:

THE OVERALL SUCCESS OF YOUR EVENT HINGES ON YOU HIRING THE RIGHT ENTERTAINER

I realize that you might not believe that right now but think about it for a minute. When is the last time you remembered the dinner you had at a corporate event? Did the centerpieces make the event memorable and successful? When is the last time you attended a corporate event when the band or the DJ made it successful?

Probably never.

The speaker or entertainer is the “key” to a successful event, but here's the problem...

Hire the wrong person and your event will be a flop. Hire someone who offends members of your audience and it is your reputation on the line. Overpay for an entertainer who delivers a sub-par performance and all eyes will be looking at you.

This report is going to give you the inside-scoop on what some entertainers and agencies do to unsuspecting event planners. You'll be armed with the knowledge you need so you won't be "taken" by these people.

In just a minute, I'm going to reveal what the 7 Biggest Mistakes are and how you can avoid them, but first let me answer a couple of questions that are probably on your mind:

Who Are You And Why Are You Revealing This Information?

My name is Ron Pearson and I'm a corporate magician and entertainer. For the past 30 years I have performed my unique magic show everywhere from London, England's prestigious Royal National Theatre to New York City's fabled Carnegie Hall. I was chosen to represent Canada as a performer at both the Commonwealth Games in Manchester, England and the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, DC, and have performed for every type of audience you can imagine.

I'm revealing information that the entertainment industry doesn't want you to know for two main reasons:

REASON #1: If you end up hiring a lousy entertainer or speaker, this closes the field not only to me but other competent professionals. Odds are, if the person you hire stinks, you'll be very reluctant to hire a similar type of performer in the future.

REASON #2: I HATE to see bad performers rip people off and make event planners look bad. It puts a back eye on my profession.

Okay, now that you know who I am and why I'm doing this, let's talk about the 7 Biggest Mistakes Event Planners Make When Hiring Entertainers and Speakers...And How To Avoid Them!

BIG MISTAKE #1: Assuming That Going Through An Entertainment Agency Or Speakers Bureau Is The Best Way To Go

Many event planners feel that they are better off hiring performers from a "reputable" agency or production house as opposed to hiring performers on their own.

While it is true that making one phone call to an agency and letting them do the work is a lot easier than doing it yourself, there is no assurance that you are going to get the performer or speaker that is perfect for your event.

Dirty little secret #1 agencies don't want you to know:

Agencies have a list of performers/speakers in different price ranges. Their first concern is booking the highest priced performer so they'll get a nice fat commission. It's for this reason that they always ask you what your budget is.

If you tell them that you have a $5,000 budget they will look to book an entertainer in that price range. This may not be the best person for your event but because they can gobble up every dollar you have to spend, the agency books them.

I know when I find out a company's budget, I do everything I can to come in UNDER the budget quoted. I just think that's good business.

Dirty little secret #2 agencies don't want you to know:

This is going to blow you away and maybe even anger you. Did you know that many agencies mark up their talent by 100% to 300% or more?

That's right! If a performer normally charges $500 for a show, some agencies will charge you up to $1,500 for the same performer!!! Are you getting a $1,500 performer? No! You're getting a $500 performer but paying three times what you should!

The agency practice of charging you DOUBLE or TRIPLE what you would have paid if you hired the performer on your own is quite common. In fact, there's a company you can easily find online right now that does exactly that-they hire magicians all over North America (some of them not very good!) and jack their prices WAY UP to the client.

Of course, there are some agencies that do NOT do this. There are some very reputable agencies that really care about their clients. Instead, they require that their talent discount their fees to them so that they can charge their clients the same amount they would have paid if they hired the performer directly. Or they add a nominal service fee on top of the talents fee. These are the types of agencies you want to deal with.

Bottom Line: Remember that an agency's first concern is about the amount of money they can make. Your needs come in a distant second. Take charge and be in control!

BIG MISTAKE #2: BASING YOUR DECISION PRIMARILY ON PRICE

Wow! This is a biggie.

Of course, price is a factor when hiring a performer. If you only have a $250 budget, you're not going to be able to hire a major star to come and entertain your group! However, many event planners place too much emphasis on price and not enough emphasis on the overall impact the entertainer will have on their event.

Is the highest priced performer always the best? Absolutely not! In fact, in a marketing course put out for entertainers, the author tells his readers to dramatically raise their fees because a lot of event planners equate the value of a performer by how much they charge. He says that it is all “perception”.

Well, it certainly won't be just “perception” if you hire someone who charges you thousands of dollars for a show that is, in reality, only worth a few hundred dollars and they “bomb”!

On the other hand, hiring the least expensive entertainer is not always the best way to go either.

Magicians, motivational speakers, and other performers are perceived as a dime a dozen- a commodity- by many event planners, and because of this they try to find the lowest priced performer.

The fact is that each performer is unique and, like in any other profession, there are entertainers who are great, some who are good, some mediocre, and some who should never be allowed on stage!

You need to base your decision on the performer who will best fulfill your needs and help you to achieve your desired outcomes.

One way you can know whether an entertainer is going to meet your needs is by whether or not he or she asks you what your needs are and what outcomes you want to achieve with your event. When you call them, do they just tell you how great their show is without finding out what you want and need?

How would you feel if you went to a doctor because you weren't feeling well and the doctor instantly prescribed some medicine without first finding out what was wrong with you? It's the same with entertainers. They should find out what you want and need first and see if they have a program that can fulfill those needs.

BEWARE!

Many performers are so desperate for work that they will say anything to get hired. They will tell you that they do things that they don't, won't, or can't do. We'll be talking about how to spot out these phonies and avoid 'em like the plague in just a few minutes.

Bottom line: Decide what your budget range is, check out a number of performers in that budget range, and choose the best person regardless of price. If your budget is so small that you cannot find an excellent performer, DO NOT HIRE ANYONE. It is far, far better to have no entertainer than it is to hire someone who is not good. Save your money and wait until you can afford someone who is outstanding.

BIG MISTAKE #3: BELIEVING TESTIMONIAL CLAIMS

Testimonials are of the utmost importance when hiring any entertainer/speaker. In fact, they are of paramount importance. If a performer does not have a TON of great testimonials it means one of two things.

First, the performer is inexperienced and hasn't worked professionally long enough to get testimonials. Second, the performer isn't very good and can't get any testimonials from his customers. In either case, this is a performer you probably don't want to hire.

Yes, testimonials are critical. In fact, I have an arsenal that I use in my marketing. What people say about a performer is infinitely more important than what a performer says about him or herself.

The sad fact is that many entertainers and speakers make up their testimonials and totally lie about their credentials. In fact, in a best-selling marketing program for entertainers a budding performer asks the "expert" what to do if you don't have any testimonials. The answer was, "Oh, just make them up. Do what ever it takes." As disgusting as this sounds, it is unfortunately common practice.

Discovering the truth is very easy. Ask the performer to give you REFERENCES. Any performer worth hiring will have a number of past clients that they will be happy to connect you with. Ask for references and then CONTACT THEM. You can find out a lot about the performer and their show by asking someone like yourself what the performer's show is like, how they were to deal with, etc.

Bottom Line: You should put a lot weight on performer's testimonials when making your decision. Just make sure you are dealing with someone who is honest and ethical.

BIG MISTAKE #4: RELYING SOLELY ON A DEMO VIDEO

A performer's testimonials are more important than their demo video, much more important. The problem with basing your decision solely on someone's demo video is the fact that anyone can make themselves look good on video through editing and retake after retake.

Three quick, true stories that will graphically illustrate this point:

HORROR STORY # 1

A friend of mine recently did a program for a major German automobile company. The event planner told me the year before she had hired a comedy juggler. She said his demo video was great and that he did some amazing things on the video. But when he did his show live he, "Couldn't do anything...Dropped everything on the floor...Was totally embarrassing."

HORROR STORY # 2

A Fortune 500 company paid a fairly famous magician to perform strolling magic at the tune of $50,000 for the evening. The president of the company saw this magician make himself float on television in front of a crowd of people on the street and asked him to make himself float for his group. "I can't do that here," the magician informed the very disgruntled client.

HORROR STORY #3:

A teacher's association hired a hypnotist based on the great demo video he sent them. In the words of the event planner, "It was a disaster. He literally couldn't hypnotize anyone. People started leaving the event. Other's starting talking amongst themselves. And the hypnotist started yelling at all of us." Yikes!

So what should you look out for in a demo video? If the video is over-produced and too slick, beware. The performer may be trying to hide behind special effects. The video should give you a feel for what the performer does, how he interacts with the audience, and what the audience response is. (The audience's response to the performer is in reality more important than what the performer actually does.) Ideally, the video should consist of clips from more than one show and show the performer in the type of performing environment you will be hiring him for.

Bottom line: A demo video can be a useful tool in helping you decide whether a performer is right for you but it should only be one the factors that contributes to your decision.

BIG MISTAKE #5 Booking Too Long Of A Presentation

Scheduling too long of a program is a mistake many event planners make. It's important to remember that it is not like people are going to a theatre or to the movies and want to see a two-hour program. In many cases, attendees will have been in meetings all day and will be tired.

Even if your event is "dinner only", your guests will have been sitting for at least 45 minutes before the show starts. If you add a cocktail hour, an awards presentation, and/or a speech from the company president, the length of the event increases dramatically.

Bottom line: The ideal length for the entertainment portion of your program is 35-minutes with a maximum of 45 minutes. This will keep your event moving along at a nice pace and keep everyone energized.

BIG MISTAKE #6: Not Getting 100% Reassurance That The Presentation Is Squeaky Clean

This is sooooo important especially in today's day and age when people are offended by the least little thing. It is vital that you make sure that the performer's material is absolutely clean or trouble brews for you on the horizon.

Last year I was contacted about performing at a company's Christmas party. They must have asked me 3 or 4 times if my act was clean. I emphasized that I ALWAYS do a clean show, no matter who I'm performing for. You never know who is in the audience and what their tolerance is for "risqué" material is. I found out when I got to the show that they had hired a comedian the year before who offended the boss's wife. They didn't want that to happen again.

Bottom line: You need to not only ask whether the performer's material is clean, you have to insist and emphasize that it MUST be clean. Ask for a reference to confirm this.

BIG MISTAKE #7: Not Getting A Money Back Guarantee

In most cases, you can avoid falling prey to a bad speaker, entertainer, or entertainment agency by insisting that they give you a 100% money back guarantee if you are not satisfied with their presentation.

This is the ultimate test as to whether someone really believes in what they are offering or if they are just full of hot air. If a performer really believes in the quality of their program, they shouldn't hesitate to guarantee it.

Bottom line: Some performers may argue that people will take advantage of them if they offer a guarantee. This is a bunch of bunk.

In the 30 years that I have offered a guarantee and over the thousands of performances, no one has EVER requested their money back. In fact many companies have me back year after year.

If the performer you're considering for your event won't back up their presentation with a guarantee...WATCH OUT!

Well, there you have it. Obviously, if you're a seasoned event planner you may have already known some of the secrets revealed in this report. But I hope you found a few gems that you can use to ensure that your next event turns out exactly as you want it so you get the applause, accolades, and acknowledgement that you so richly deserve.
